The Wren-designed mansion was the home of Sir William Gore, Sir Drummond Smith and Nathan de Rothchild. It was home of the Rothchild Bank during the Second World War, before being acquired by the Arts Educational School, now renamed Tring Park School for the Performing Arts.

The museum contains theatre and fairground organs and other memorabilia, first collected by Charles Hart, formerly a builder, and also a fairground owner. There are performances from a selection of the instruments on show. A delightful repeat visit for us.
